

RIGHTS

Laws must secure equal rights. And people must be able to exercise those rights.

This is the simple basis of KVINFO's work under the headline Access to Justice.

The first prerequisite for gender equality is to ensure formal equality in constitutions, family laws, and the ratification of international conventions. However, in order to guarantee de facto equality, implementation and awareness among authorities and individual women and men must also be secured.

The programme focuses on access to justice on many levels, from advocacy for legal change to working to secure implementation and raising awareness.

Examples of KVINFO's partnerships on Access to Justice include:

- Support for organizations advocating for gender equality during the writing of new constitutions in Egypt, Tunisia, and Yemen.
- Raising awareness of the enhanced rights for women in Morocco's new family code, e.g. training in mediation in divorce cases for judges.
- Projects to raise awareness and fight child marriage and early pregnancies on the community level as well as developing advocacy strategies across the region.

Read more about the work here
<http://kvinfo.org/mena/access-justice>